THE ASSOCIATED CHARITIES

Some Confusion Caused by Its Change of

The Appeal of the Emergency Relie Committee-Money Needed for Administrative Purposes.

A reader of The Star writes as follows

"Unless I am much duller of comprehension than people generally, I do not think the public will very clearly understand the situation as presented by the Associated Charities. Tuesday's Star had an article under the heading of 'Poor Relief Fund, in which it was stated that $2,000 or $3,000 ought to be provided immediately to mee the wants of the emergency relief committee. In the same article Treasurer Edson is represented as saying that every dollar so contributed 'will reach those who are really in need.' This is supplemented by a report of Secretary Wilson's remarks on the subject, to your reporter, in which he is quoted as saying: 'It is hoped that the community will respond generously to the call of the committee and send subscriptions to the treasurer, Mr. John Joy Edson, or to any member of the committee. They may rest assured that the money will be used in the most discreet manner and none of it will be used for administrative purposes.'

none of it will be used for administrative purposes."

"On the other hand, I have before me a somewhat voluminous combined appeal for contributions, issued in the form of circulars, signed by the 'board of managers of the Associated Charities' and by the 'finance committee' of that body. In these documents it is stated that the money they ask for is required 'for administration purposes." ask for is required 'for administration purposes only,' and, further, that the yearly expenses for these purposes are estimated at $7,500 per annum.

"What are we to understand from these

"What are we to understand from these apparently conflicting statements? Are there two separate funds, to which the public is expected to contribute? If so, why? And, if so, are givers expected to give to both funds, or may they choose to which purpose their givings are to be applied? I have every year given something to the Associated Charities, as originally organized, and am prepared to contribute again, because I am opposed to street begging and to indiscriminate heip being extended to all askers, and usually the most freely to the least needy and deserving. freely to the least needy and deserving. But, as the case is set forth by the two But, as the case is set forth by the two somewhat confusing presentations above referred to, and laying aside for the time being the question whether or not the sum of $7,500 is not an excessive amount to be taken out of the contributions given by the charitable and expended for purely 'administration purposes,' I am at a loss to determ'ne just how or to whom my offerings shall be made, so that they will do the most good. I will say, however, that I much prefer that what I do give shall be applied directly for the relief of the poor, rather than used for salaries and the payment of office expenses, which, in a degree, are of course necessary, but which, I subare of course necessary, but which, I sub-mit, ought to be kept within reasonable bounds. Let it not be forgotten that the calls on this community are many, and that, as a rule, those both able and willing to give are comparatively few."

Secretary's Wilson's Explanation. The attention of Secretary Wilson of the Associated Charities was called to this matter by a Star reporter, and he said there is evidently a misunderstanding in regard to the character of the work done by the Associated Charities. "Under the present system," he said, "it is a non-relief giving organization. Our work is one of investigation, registration and sending cases for relief to relief-giving organizations, such as the charitable institutions, the churches, lodges and other bodies. It was found recently that many cases calling for assistance were from a class of persons not connected with or having claims on any church or relief association, and as there were no funds available the citizens' emergency relief committee was organized. It was decided to ask from the public a sum of money amounting to two or three thousand dollars, which could be disbursed Associated Charities will not disburse a single cent of this sum. The committee has no office rent nor salaries to pay, and the money will be expended in the relief of persons sent to it by the Associated Charrelief committee, of which Mr. John Joy Edson is treasurer, goes to the relief of the "In regard to the $7,500, which it is estimated will be required to provide for the 'administration purposes' of the Associated Charities, it may be thought, especially in this city, where a non-relief organization is unknown, that this is a large amount to expend in such a way. It should be remembered, however, that the Associated Charities under the present system alms to be a clearing house for the entire or-ganized charity work of the District, and it is believed that if the system is properly carried out it will save many times that amount to the charitably inclined people of the District. In New York a similar organization expends annually between $40,000 and $50,000 for administra-tive purposes, while in Baltimore $10,000 is expended annually in this way. Last is expended annually in this way. Last year the people of this city contributed some $30,000, which was paid out in two months. As the weather his winter is not as severe as it was last winter it is believed that all deserving and worthy persons can be helped this year with one-third of this amount, which will be represented by the mount required to main resented by the money required to maintain the Associated Charities for an entire year and by the special fund which the emergency relief committee has called for."

HOMING INSTINCT OF HORSES. They Are Better Than Civil Engineers

at Finding Their Way. Dr. Eugene Murray-Aaron in Popular Science News. Horses and mules are known by all who have had much experience with them as famous pathfinders. A good story of this power in the horse tribe is told of a mule by John T. Campbell of Rockville, Ind. In the early days of prospecting in Oregon a party were in the field, and had covered a very circuitous course, which they depended on a civil engineer to enable them to retrace, should they see any objects worthy of a revisit. Having decided to return to the home camp by the most direct route the engineer, after calculating latitudes and departures, pointed out what he believed to be the correct direction along which they must proceed to reach the de-sired point. When night overtook them they found that they were not at the home camp, as they had expected to be, though the engineer assured them that they were not far away from the desired point, al-though he was quite unable to say in which direction it was best to turn. At this stage of their wanderings the driver of the team turned one of his mules loose; and at once, much to the discom-fiture of the engineer and the amusement of the rest of the party, it set off in a direction that brought them to the home camp. Now, this mule had never before been allowed to wander in this locality, for fear that it would stray and become lost, nor had it ever before been over the route by which they had reached the point where the engineer was at fault. It was after dark; there was no one at the camp to make any noise that its sharp ears might detect, and the way was entirely unknown to it. How had it at once taken the route that would lead to camp?

A case allied to this happened to me in the Blue mountains of Jamaica, where a pony that had never before been in the parish, where I was lost in a tropical storm, took me back to the point from which we had started in the morning, and which we had started in the morning, and that by a much nearer route, entirely new to both of us. While I was aware by the growth of the trees that we were headed in the right general direction, it was at any time impossible for me to see more than one hundred wards ahead. At the time that I left the main trail and got on what afterward provided to be a much the contract of the second to be a much the contract of the second to be a much that the second to be a s time that I left the main trail and got on what afterward proved to be a much shorter cut it was impossible for me to see anything in the blinding fury of the cloud-burst. How the pony found its way with so much satisfaction to itself—it never for one instant appeared to falter on its course—I was unable to determine. It was more than once my experience after that, when we had any difference of opinion as to the ramified ways in those Jamaica hills, that wholly on the body's power to repair its loss, that is on nutrition. In old age this power grows less and less. Hence its weakness and sadness. Trifles are burdens. Ordinary food no longer nourishes. Multitudes of elderly persons find new zest and vigor through the use of SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod-liver Oil. It slips into the blood and helps to digest other food.
